REASONS FOR ALLOWANCE

1. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: the prior art does not teach or fairly suggest, in a method of shaping a thin side wall of a body without cutting, including automated determining of the actual geometry of the thin side wall, calculating the difference between the actual and desired geometries, and deforming the thin side wall by application of pressure, the steps of: determining local deformation zones in which the difference between the desired and actual geometries exceeds a defined predetermined value; calculating an energy profile to be locally applied to the local deformation zones; applying defined pressure to one side of the thin side wall; and automatically increasing the deformability of the thin side wall of the body in the local deformation zones by a defined application of energy thereto, in accordance with the calculated energy profile. Regarding claims 23-27, the prior art does not teach or fairly suggest an apparatus which includes a means for automatically determining and storing actual geometry of the thin side wall of a body; a computer means for predetermining desired geometry, comparing actual and desired geometry and calculating the difference therebetween, determining local deformation zones, and calculating an energy profile to be locally applied in the local deformation zones; a controllable pressure unit; and a unit means for applying energy in a defined automated way in accordance with the calculated local energy profile. Feuerherm et al. (US Patent 5,840,223) and Dinkel et al. (US Patent 5,928,581) both teach shaping the side wall of a body by controlling the extruder. Mahoney et al. (US Patent 5,007,265) teaches forming a body by applying gas pressure to the walls of the body, and controls the gas pressure by measuring the strain rate of the body and comparing it to a predetermined strain rate profile. Nyrhila (US Patent 5,592,842) teaches forming a wall of a body without a form, as in instant claim 2, but does not teach the control or measurement steps.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
